MANAGING CHILDREN.

Why They Should at All Times He Civen An important point in managing children is to always have ready some-thing for the little hands to do at those times which come quite often on rainy and other days when, tired of play, they listlessly gaze through the window or wander aimlessly about, not knowing what to do with themselves. Children at such times are a great trial to the busy and often nervous people of the house, and are quite likely to be scolded, though such a course is so unwise and unjust that it course is so unwise and unjust that it disappear without any assignable reacan lead only to the worst results in son. In other, though much rarer, ing words, kindly spoken, are neces-sary with all bright children and are sary with all bright children and are sary with all bright children and are affective, but words utthe child's future. Calm and reprovusually very effective, but words ut-tered in a sharp, scolding tone must in preach to them, and false hair was altered in a sharp, scolding tone must in most cases work an injury to the child's disposition. It is all the more sad, because the matter could be so easily managed by a very little attention on the mother's part.

How often we hear mothers or older sisters say to some little child who is full of desire to do right if it only knew how: "Do get something to do; how lazy you are: I never saw such a good-for-nothing child. I am sure I den't know what is to become of you," and a great deal more of such talk, which, aims, most people have heard too often. The child at such times is not in fault. It is the mother's duty to see that suitable work is always ready, and she should require the child to do a moderate task for which she should
